Recorded by the University Broadcasting Service by KUAC Radio Station

Dave Geesin, announcer

Program #11

June 15, 1969

Professor Everette reads a Christmas poem – In minus 60s. It was written during the winter of 1961-62 when the temperatures dropped to low bottoms around Fairbanks. He reads the Lights of Arctic Christmas and Livengood.

Program #12

June 22, 1969

Professor Everette reads sections from the series called Journey to light. It picks up the changing pattern after Christmas in January and moves out toward spring. He said it is a fascinating season of the year to him. It is something like a journal and he gives the dates of the individual units that he is reading from this series starting with January 12th.
